Registry of Election Finance announces Election Finance Training Seminars for candidates and their treasurers

FRANKFORT, Ky. – The Registry of Election Finance, the agency charged with enforcing state campaign finance laws, will present Election Finance Training Seminars beginning Monday, March 8, 2010. The seminars are designed to educate and train candidates and their treasurers on Kentucky’s campaign finance laws and equip them to run effective and successful campaigns.

Five seminars will be presented in Frankfort. Candidates, campaign treasurers and others interested in campaign finance laws are welcome.

The seminars are offered free of charge, and registration forms are available by contacting the Registry at (502) 573-2226, or may be accessed online at www.kref.ky.gov.

“Training is an important part of our regulatory responsibilities, so we are very excited to present these seminars to candidates and their staffs,” said Craig C. Dilger, Chairman of the Registry. “Our team has worked hard to provide an informative first-rate program. I encourage candidates to take advantage of these opportunities to ask questions and get feedback. They are designed to help campaigns understand exactly what is expected under Kentucky’s election finance laws.”

The Registry administers and enforces campaign finance laws for all candidates for local and statewide office, including candidates for state legislative, judicial, city, county and school board offices.
